Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 25 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold but fine for many Monday, rain moving east Tuesday.

Today:
A very cold start but most areas fine, dry and bright. Wintry showers continuing over north and west Scotland and perhaps Irish Sea coasts of northwest England and north Wales. Breezy for many and feeling cold.

Tonight:
Clear and cold for many parts with widespread frost. Some rain and snow over parts of Scotland then rain and stronger winds arriving into Northern Ireland later in the night.

Tuesday:
Rain moving slowly east. Snow mainly over high ground of northern England and Scotland, perhaps to low levels at first for Northern Ireland. Cold for many, becoming milder in west.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Cold and bright across northern Scotland with wintry showers. Milder elsewhere, with rain at times, heavy in the west with hill snow across Scotland. Windy, gales possible in southern areas.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.